Prologue:

Trouble at Hogwarts

It was just a normal, or as normal as possible, day at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. Things were just fine, students were attending their classes, and the teachers were teaching, everything was perfect, so of course something had to go wrong. A loud crash echoed and a woman screamed. A troll had broken through the bathroom, again. With a wave of his wand young wizard Harry Potter defeated the beast, and yet again saved his school. Ron spoke with Harry, and congratulated him. Little did Harry know that true trouble was just around the corner. "Hey kid, how about a balloon?" asked a voice. Ron looked around. "Yeah, I'm talking to you Ron, come on how about it?"

"Well I would like a balloon but I don't know. Do they float?" asked the famous boy wizard.

"Oh yes, they float. We all float down here, and when you get here you'll float too you little shit," laughed the voice. The face of Pennywise came into view as the horrible clown creature reached for Ron and dragged him into the darkness. Where Ron had stood, there now was a small puddle of blood.

An hour later the remains were found. The bloodied corpse's face was twisted into a horrifying grimace. The eyes were dangling from the sockets. Spiders were crawling in and out of his mouth. Many puncture wounds were scattered across his body. Ron truly was dead. Harry was yet to find out, but you can be sure that when he does discover his friend's death, there will be hell to pay.
